The contribution of a teacher is crucial to the strengthening of the professional fraternity and the nation's intellectual infrastructure. Not merely constrained to the delivery of academic content, the role of a teacher surpasses classroom boundaries to become a learning facilitator, resource developer, evaluator, guide, mentor, counsellor and role model. Teachers of architecture, although from the professional field, cannot be an exception to the rule.

Teaching is a science that needs to be understood and learnt by every teacher. However, the need for special training for teachers of professional courses is yet to be fully appreciated. It is now time to acknowledge the fact that the "technology of education" is vast and developed and has the potential to contribute to almost all its sub domains. Architecture education is a sub domain of higher education. Application of knowledge from the field of education to that of Architecture Education will not only enrich the learning process of architecture students but also definitely help in improving the general quality of architecture in the long run. Teachers do not have to rely entirely on self experience. If lessons from technology of education are understood and adopted by young teachers in their early years of career, a lot can be achieved in the future of architecture education through their involvement.

The training programme is expected to be cover:

- Theory from the field of education.
- Models of teaching and their application to subjects in the architecture curriculum
- Techniques for application in the architecture studio.
- Creative exercises to enhance the quality of teaching in architecture.

The programme, specially designed for teachers of schools of architecture, aims to sensitize teachers about new concepts in teaching and enables the participants to develop competence in understanding recent advances in education technology, to learn to improve pedagogies and to better their inter personal skills in order to become effective faculty.

The young teachers and "to be" teachers too, are invited to this platform to share their experiences, resolve their classroom and studio issues and take back with them several experiences to enrich their academic proficiency.
