ARCHITECTURE is a discipline, a profession and a state of mind, which must conveniently serve the purpose for which it was built. The role of architecture is to satisfy the physical, social and aesthetic needs of society, where architects play a crucial role in effecting change responsible for the social and environmental imports of their professional activities. Since ancient times it has been believed that architecture carries discernible meanings which are consciously or unconsciously built into them by their designers. As Richard Rogers mentioned "The twentieth century is a period dominated by innovation and the spirit of science. It has had revolutionizing effects on all fields of man's endeavors-art, economic and politics". Through the unprecedented scale of scientific change, the World is becoming an artifact, an industrial village. The need for growth and increased density in urban centers persists and has been growing exponentially. Everywhere, people are moving from villages to cities, and with rapid population growth, land is scarce and expensive, particularly in big cities, leaving developers and builders nowhere to go but up, where tall buildings beginning to dot the sky, and their resulting consequences, are products of our time and solutions for problems they create.

Through this teachers training programme, we intend to address identified issues and challenges of high rise development, discuss relevant solutions, which in turn could be percolated by the teachers amongst students.
